

PEM

1. PEM means protein energy malnutrition. It is a scenario when body does not get enough food so it lacks of energy and protein. It usually happens with children at yearly age or older adults aged 65 or more. Commonly seen in infants and toddlers. It effects their growth and development.

 what kind of deficiency is PEM?

A. vitamin def B. mineral def C. protein def D. all of the above -->(d)

2. why do we need food?

Energy (give us power to play and move), protein (build body and repair), nutrients (vitamin and mineral-help us grow and stay healthy). Clean and safe water is also very much needed to keep a child healthy.

3. why does pem happens?

Not enough food both in quantity and quality

Too many existing illness

Diarrhea (loosing nutrients)

Poor feeding practice

4. Types

Marasmus: very thin, loss of fat, muscle, low weight

Kwashiorkor: swollen feet and body(edema)hair changes, skin changes, weak and tired

Marasmic kwashiorkor: it can be both  which type has swelling? Kwashiorkor.

5. sign and symptoms

Poor growth

Swollen feet

Thin body

Poor appetite

Weak tired

Irritated

* figure

6. how do doctor's check

Measure the upper arm

Weight

Check height/weight

Look for swelling in both feet

7. treatment

Check the child and find out his sickness level

Give them nutrition

Treat hydration

Treat infection

Check progress regularly

8. management at home

Give healthy nutritious food as advised

Give safe fluids

Personal hygiene

Hygiene of handlers

Give medicines if prescribed

Go for follow up

9.prevention

Exclusive breastfeeding

Eat different healthy food during weaning

Vaccination according to age

Maintain basic hygiene

Check growth and development feed the children well. When they eat well, they grow well. Healthy children today, brighter future tomorrow.

Happy learning.